Why focus on reducing women’s imprisonment?

England and Wales Fact Sheet

April 2019

There are now over 2,200 more women in prison than there were 25 years ago.¹

- 7,745 women were sent to prison in England and Wales in 2018.²
- 600 pregnant women, on average, are held in prison each year.³
- 93 women have died in prison in England and Wales since March 2007.⁴

Women represent less than 5% of the prison population in England and Wales.⁵

Women are more likely than men to be serving short prison sentences. In 2017, 73% were sentenced to less than 12 months.²

- 12 months or more 23%
- less than 1 month 25%
- 6 months to less than 12 months 9%
- 1 month to less than 6 months 43%

Transforming Lives

- The Prison Reform Trust (PRT) is an independent UK charity working to create a just, humane and effective penal system.
- PRT has a longstanding interest in improving criminal justice outcomes for women. Its Transforming Lives programme 2015-2020 aims to reduce the unnecessary imprisonment of women in the UK.

An estimated 17,240 children are affected by maternal imprisonment a year.⁶

- 48% of women committed their offence to support someone else’s drug use, compared to 22% of men.⁷
- 82% of women sentenced to prison had committed a non-violent offence, compared to 67% of men.⁸
- 28% of women’s crimes were financially motivated, compared to 20% of men.⁹

“We have potential - no-one sees that - they just see the crimes, drugs, mental health - they won’t see what’s behind it”

PRT/User Voice Women’s Council member

“If the government turns its good intentions into action, many thousands of women and families, including victims, will benefit. That work must start immediately.”

PRT comment on the Female Offender Strategy, 2018
Women are 135% more likely than men to self-harm in prison.\(^{14}\)

The government’s Female Offender Strategy 2018\(^{10}\)

- Commits to reducing the women’s prison population.
- Recognises women’s distinct needs and vulnerabilities within the criminal justice system.
- Outlines measures that the Ministry of Justice are taking to achieve cross-government reform.
- Emphasises the importance of early intervention, including liaison and diversion, out of court disposals and a focus on community-based solutions.
- Promotes a whole system approach by local authorities and all UK governments.
- Aims to make custody as decent and effective as possible for women who do need to be there.

There has been an 8% increase in the number of self-harm incidents in women’s prisons in England and Wales, since 2016.\(^{11}\)

Women are 130 women compared to 27 men were sentenced to prison for their children’s truancy between 2007-2017.\(^{12}\)

Women are 49% of women in prison identify as being victims of domestic violence, compared to 6% of men.\(^{13}\)

In the financial year 2016/17 the arrest rates for women were: \(^{16}\)

- 4 per 1,000 white women
- 8 per 1,000 black women

Women are more likely than men to:

- Be identified as suffering from anxiety and depression in prison, 49% to 23%.\(^{18}\)
- Report having attempted suicide at some point in their life, 46% to 21%.\(^{19}\)
- Need help supporting a drug problem on entry to prison, 39% to 28%.\(^{20}\)
- Say they have a problem with alcohol on arrival to prison, 24% to 18%.\(^{21}\)
- Be in prison for their first offence, 22% to 14%.\(^{22}\)
“Simply put, locking women up for a few months many miles from home leads only to increased alienation, increased problems for families and carers, and, perhaps most damagingly, an increased likelihood of reoffending and recall. They should not be in prison to begin with.”

Kate Green MP

Abuse and trauma – Most women in prison have been victims of much more serious offences than those they are accused of committing.

- There are strong links between women’s offending behaviour and their experience of domestic abuse both physical and emotional, coercive control and sexual abuse.
- 53% of women report having experienced emotional, physical or sexual abuse as a child, compared to 27% of men.
- Experience of abuse and trauma can lead to substance misuse, either as a result of coercion or as a coping mechanism to deal with trauma. A woman’s situation is often worsened by poverty, substance dependency or poor mental health.
- Lack of funding for services in the community means that women cannot access support and treatment, increasing their chances of coming into contact with the police and criminal justice system.
- A lack of training for those involved at all stages of the criminal justice system, can mean opportunities are missed to identify serious mental health issues at early stages such as arrest, prosecution and sentencing.

For further information on this please read:

- There's a reason we're in trouble - Domestic abuse as a driver to women's offending
- Leading Change: the role of local authorities in supporting women with multiple needs

Race and ethnicity - In comparison to white women Asian women are 26% more likely to be arrested. Black women are 25% more likely than white women to receive a custodial sentence at crown court if convicted.

- Black, Asian and minority ethnic (BAME) women comprise 11.9% of the women’s population in England and Wales, but 18% of the women’s prison population.
- BAME women are also more likely to be on remand. Black women are 29% more likely to be remanded in prison at crown court than white women.
- BAME women face racial and religious discrimination from staff and other prisoners, and report feeling less safe in prison.
- Foreign national women make up 8% of the women’s population in England and Wales but over 12% of the women received into prison each year. Some foreign national women are known to have been coerced or trafficked into offending.
- Foreign national women in prison experience particular vulnerabilities including insecure immigration status and often report feeling isolated, unsafe, disempowered and confused about the criminal justice process.

For further information on this please read:

- Still no way out: Foreign national women and trafficked women in the criminal justice system
- Counted Out: Black, Asian and minority ethnic women in the criminal justice system
Mothers in prison - on 31 December 2017 there were 93 pregnant women in prison.33

- Women in prison are far more likely than men to be primary carers of children. A Ministry of Justice survey found that around 60% of women compared with about 45% of men in prison had children.34
- A fifth of mothers in prison are lone parents prior to their imprisonment.35
- Only 9% of children are cared for by their father when their mother goes to prison.36 In contrast research has found that nearly three-quarters of children live with their mother when their father is imprisoned.37
- Research indicates that children who have experienced maternal imprisonment are at greater risk of unemployment, drug use, alcoholism and coming into contact themselves with the criminal justice system in later life.38
- The impact on mothers themselves of being imprisoned is significant, increasing the levels of distress and exacerbating any existing ill-health.39
- The UN Bangkok Rules specify that non-custodial sentences are preferable for pregnant women and those with dependent children, but the law and sentencing guidance are inconsistently applied.40
- Whether or not women have dependent children is still not recorded or routinely asked by criminal justice agencies.

For further information on this please read:
- What about me? The impact on children when mothers are involved in the criminal justice system

Women on remand - In 2017, 43% of women entering prison did so on remand.41

- 14.3% of women in prison, compared to 11.1% of men, are held on remand.42
- Almost 9 in 10 women on remand are low to medium risk of serious harm.43
- In 2017, 62% of women remanded into prison by the magistrates' court and 39% remanded by the crown courts did not go on to receive an immediate custodial sentence.44
- 17% of self-harm incidents by women in prison in 2017 were committed by those held on remand.46

Women recalled to prison - make up around 8% of women in prison.46

- The Offender Rehabilitation Act 2014 introduced a one-year mandatory post-custody supervision period for all those sentenced to less than 12 months in prison.
- As women mostly receive short prison sentences, they have been disproportionately affected by this change.
- In 2017, 1,651 women were recalled to custody, there has been a year-on-year increase with 1,378 women recalled in 2016 and 1,155 in 2015.47
- Between 2016 to 2017 there was a 36% increase in the number of women (recalled to prison), who had been sentenced to less than 12 months.48

For further information on this please read:
- Broken Trust: The rising numbers of women recalled to prison
Accommodation and employment for women on release - In the financial year 2017/18, only 55.8% of women were released from prison with settled accommodation.49

- A 2018 report on HMP and YOI Bronzefield found that 40-50% of women were discharged with no fixed abode.50
- A lack of accommodation increases the risk of reoffending and jeopardises a women’s ability to engage in employment, training and support services.
- Many women lose their homes and possessions as a result of imprisonment. Women who are sent to prison continue to be declared as ‘intentionally homeless’ in some local authorities. Others are deemed ineligible for housing or cut off from Housing Benefit and evicted for rent arrears.51
- Employment outcomes for women following short prison sentences are worse than for men. 9.4% of women released from a local prison have a positive employment outcome compared to 26.2% of men.52
- 50% of women who have been involved in the criminal justice system, including conviction, caution or prison sentence, are claiming out-of-work benefits two years later, compared to 35% of men.53

For further information on this please read:
- Home Truths: housing for women in the criminal justice system
- Working it out: Employment for women offenders

“The commitment in the Female Offender Strategy to reduce the use of short sentences for women by taking a more preventive, community-based approach represents an opportunity to do something radical in seeking to shrink the prison population.”

Justice Committee, 2019 54

Impact of imprisonment on women - The average distance a woman is held from her home is 64 miles.55

- Women are imprisoned further from home and receive fewer visits, limiting their capacity to maintain relationships and family contact. Prisoners who receive visits from family members are 39% less likely to reoffend than those who do not.56
- The reoffending rate for women in 2016 averaged 23%57 while 70.7% of women serving a short custodial sentence (less than 12 months) reoffended.58
- Women are much more likely than men to self-harm whilst in prison. In 2017, women comprised 19% of all self-harm incidents in England and Wales although accounting for 5% of the prison population.59
- Research on the impact of long-term imprisonment found that women reported an acutely more painful experience than men. This was linked to separation from their children and family, the loss of relationships, experiences of abuse and trauma in pre-prison life, the strain on their mental health, and the lack of control, privacy and trust inside prison.60

“The exorbitant costs of prison are sucking up resources that could be used for community alternatives that work.”

Dr Kate Paradine, CEO of Women in Prison 61
Community solutions - Across England and Wales, a 10% reduction in women’s imprisonment could save £9.5-14.7 million.

- Out of court disposals can offer a simple, swift and proportionate response to women’s minor offending. The proportion of women dealt with by out of court disposals is small and continues to decrease. 55,740 women were given cautions in 2007 and only 16,727 in 2017 - a 70% decrease over 10 years.
- The use of suspended sentences for women in England and Wales has been steadily increasing from 7,056 in 2010 to 7,847 in 2017.
- The use of community sentences has decreased by 43% from 2010-2017. Although, they allow women to maintain community ties, employment and accommodation, whilst reducing the disruption to their families and children.
- Academic research has shown that 55.8% of women released from prison reoffend within a year compared to 26% of those sentenced to a community order.
- Women’s community centres can provide effective support programmes for those at risk of offending and play a vital role in reducing women’s reoffending. They can provide safe, non-stigmatising settings for women to address issues that can drive their offending such as substance abuse or accessing support with violent relationships.
- Indicative estimates by Greater Manchester estimate that over £6 is saved for every £1 spent on the Together Women Project women’s centre.
- Women’s centres offer a holistic approach to women’s resettlement, providing a wraparound service. They can also support women who have had contact with the criminal justice system to move away from offending.
- The Restorative Justice Council recommends that more women who offend should be offered a chance to take part in appropriate restorative justice programmes and these should be delivered by women’s centres.

“...Despite this recent evidence on the effectiveness of Women’s Centres, their future remains uncertain – not helped by commissioning and contracting arrangements that fall foul of basic market stewardship principles.”

The Centre for Social Justice, 2018

Rate of immediate custody - for women per 100,000 of the population.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Region</th>
<th>Rate of Immediate Custody per 100,000</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Northern Ireland</td>
<td>14</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>England</td>
<td>30</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Scotland</td>
<td>44</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Wales</td>
<td>48</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
5 House of Commons written question 165645, 23 July 2018
8 Table 2.9i, Ministry of Justice (2019) Offender management statistics quarterly: October to December 2018, London: Ministry of Justice
13 House of Commons written Question 174009, 09 October 2018
24 Prison Reform Trust (2017) "There’s a reason we’re in trouble": Domestic abuse as a driver to women’s offending, London: PRT
27 Table 5.3 Ministry of Justice (2016) Black, Asian and Minority Ethnic disproportionality in the Criminal justice system in England and Wales. London MoJ
29 Table 5.3, Ministry of Justice (2016) Black, Asian and Minority Ethnic disproportionately in the Criminal justice system in England and Wales. London: Ministry of Justice
31 Ministry of Justice FOI 180110013 response 7 February 2018
33 House of Commons written question 131531, 16 March 2018
41 Ministry of Justice (2018) Table 2.1, Offender Management statistics quarterly: July to September 2017, London: MoJ